Service Awards 2019

Why do service awards at all?

- An article in Adiona Magazine illustrated the strengths of giving gifts to staff:
- 77% of staff work harder when they feel better recognised.
- Retaining staff and recruitment is helped by using gifts to recognise hard work. Every one needs to retain at the moment as there is very little staff to acquire
- Recognising hard work drives efficiency and success and helps to spread goodwill around the company.

Get Gifts features in the Sunday Times

April 4, 2016 /

Louise was lucky enough to be interviewed on her new staff incentive scheme - Get Gifts.ie, for the Sunday Times on the 3rd of March 2016.

Staff incentive benefits are crystal clear

Motivating existing employees and recruiting new ones has become a real art, writes Sandra O'Connell

Ms. Lonergan says companies 'want to reward the people they have and generally put a bit of buzz back into the workplace'

An increasingly tight labour market is providing Louise Lonergan with opportunities for business growth. Lonergan Corporate Gifts, was set up in 1998 to provide "length of service" and "safety record" awards for the employees of large companies. A chance request by a multinational client in 2015 prompted her to develop a new line of business.

"We were asked to set up an incentive scheme whereby all its 3,000 employees could get points that allowed them to log on to our site and choose from a variety of gifts — from luggage to electronic goods and jewellery — which we then delivered to all 3,000 homes," said Lonergan.

The result was GetGifts.ie, a new dedicated online staff-incentive gift scheme. The website does not formally launch until April 4, yet customers are already lining up. "Because there were so many redundancies, companies didn't want to be seen as spending money on incentives," she said.
